

GreeNDot is an on-campus bystander intervention strategy that teaches students, staff and faculty how to recognize individual decisions, moments, values, and actions that contribute to a culture of harm and bystander inaction (red dots). The nationally-recognized program also provides strategies for how to act, both reactively and proactively, so our campus is safer and promotes a culture of care (green dots). While the training is focused on interpersonal violence scenarios such as sexual assault, dating and domestic violence, and stalking, the skills learned can help in many different situations. The four-hour certified training uses small group interactions, activities, and videos to help facilitate discussion surrounding potentially harmful situations. Facilitators also discuss barriers to action, and teach methods anyone can use, which serves as the impetus for our motto, "No one has to do everything, but everyone has to do something." Come learn what your greeNDot will be! Training is now open to all faculty and staff to experience the same training as our students. Register here.
